Markets floundered across the board this week as supply superceded demand. Weather hampered activity on the East Coast as Hurricane Florence caused mass flooding, but little damage to impact short-term commodity markets. Lumber futures dropped again this week, adding to the downward tone. OSB started the week off quiet, with secondaries and mills second guessing any strategy to hold panels for a hurricane replenishment that never came. Housing starts for August came out stronger, but most of the growth was from the multifamily sector.
