Trends in lumber across North America held steady from last week. April 24' housing report did little to bolster hopes of a raise in demand for the mills. Western markets continued flat with very little interest from buyers, and mills trying to dig in on any deeper discounts. SYP has continued to push up, with mills and wholesalers clearing excess inventory and raising quotes. Anemic trading was a common theme. Panels seemed to find a trading level last week pushing several mills OTM per there usual M.O. Volume this week has been very light as prices have pushed up and buyers have stepped away. Time will tell whether they have the takeaway to continue the runup. Suns in 4? Not this year...Jokic staring down 4 straight as they look to close out the T-Wolves tonight.
