The short week brought light activity, and most markets were either flat or only slightly changed in either direction. Weather in the Midwest mucked up some jobsites and slowed takeaway. OSB mills are trying to hold on to the bump they got a few weeks ago, but more and more it looks like that party is winding down again. As we roll into summer and family vacation season, it may become more difficult for markets to sustain any true type of runs, but time will tell. No substantive changes from the Fed means that the challenges to starting new projects remain for the time being. Next week should give a clearer picture as to the direction of this market in lumber and panels.
