The market had mixed reviews this week as the slow simmer out West turned into a flame with DF GRN and Dry pushing up double digits. 2x6 and 2x12 saw the most action with most mills OTM and what was quoted was at a substantial premium to the last several months. SPF out East saw a similar run, not quite the pace as out West, but a run none the less and is up double digits on most dimensional lines. Pine in South garnered much less attention as they dried out from the wet weather LW and activity stayed muted. With that said specified 14s and 16s are carrying a large premium to 12s so be careful as you quote. OSB remains on solid footing as most mills continue to quote at last weeks levels...Northern or Southern. FIR plywood out West is status quo with little movement either way. Pine plywood on the other hand has been steadily moving upward and that trend continued this week with double digit increases across the board....NFL pre-season week 2 Eagles v the Belichickless Patriots tonight. Be curious to see how they hold up
