Markets tilted upward again this week driven more by concerns over supply than any appreciable demand. Southeastern markets, hit hard by the hurricanes, saw more activity as buyers covered more forward needs for fear of lack of availability. The fiber base in SYP took some hits to be sure, but buying was tempered with the knowledge that the bulk of demand based on storm damage will take a lot of time to come to fruition. SPF ticked slightly up, and green DF found a bottom this week after weeks of softness. Plywood saw continued increases, but they appear to be moderating. OSB ticked up a fuzz as well after a prolonged period of flatness, but activity remains lean. New York is excited about the Yankees, but the Mets will have an uphill struggle, and the Jets are just a M-E-S-S mess mess mess!
